In general terms, margin FX and CFD is an agreement between you and The Product Issuer which allows you to make a profit or loss from fluctuations in the price of the underlying asset. See the relevant PDS for further details.

4.2 Consult your financial adviser

Before trading, you should give consideration to your objectives, financial situation, needs and the risks of loss associated with trading in order to assist you in deciding whether margin FX and CFDs are suitable for your purposes. ACY Capital recommends that potential customers seek advice from an appropriately qualified independent financial adviser before deciding to open an account.

You should carefully consider whether trading in margin FX and CFDs is appropriate for you in the light of your financial circumstances.

In deciding whether or not you wish to become involved in trading margin FX and CFDs with our product issuer, you should be aware CFDs are speculative products that are highly leveraged and carry significantly greater risk than non-leveraged investments such as share trading, and you could both gain and lose large amounts of money. You may sustain total losses in excess of the moneys you initially deposit. In certain circumstances, Oanda may exercise its discretion to close out your position. You should not invest in margin FX and CFDs unless you understand and are comfortable with the risks. You should refer to the PDS for further details.
